F. JULIUS FOHS

HEBRON WINS FIRST IN SPELLING CONTEST

In a recent issue of the Sunday Courier Journal, in its magazine section, containing a half-page write-up and a double column picture of F. Julius Fohs, an anonymous writer under the caption, "Kentucky's Young Oil King", among a great many other things, has this to say of the well known and very successful former Marion boy:

"An impoverished Jewish boy, with a zeal for learning and an indomitable energy struggled through the public school of Marion, Ky., some years ago. He was forced to borrow from boyhood friends to buy books. A few older men of the city, impressed by the boy's ambition and honesty, loaned him the money. Time passed. Today he is one of the most commanding figures in the oil world. He is F. Julius Fohs. The name may mean nothing to the reader. Julius Fohs is modest. But in the oil world his name is embossed in letters of gold."

"His parents, who were Jews, settled in Marion in 1889, when he was six years old. An unusual thing for his race was that the older Fohs was never able to accumulate much of this world's goods. Julius was forced to borrow frequently the funds necessary to complete his high school course, as well as a course at State University at Lexington and finally at Columbia, New York."

"And those per cent in Marion, Ky., who had helped to his struggle for an education, have been paid back many fold. Tips on oil fields have been dropped admirably."

"Mr. Fohs of course has become wealthy, but if his old relatives and former associates are curious to know the number of millions with which to measure his wealth and were dependent on him for information their curiosity would never be gratified, but it may be said that he is the possessor of more millions than any man who ever grew up or went out of Kentucky."

The author of this article, who ever he may be, intimates that if we were to ask Julius to whom, more than any one else, he was indebted for his great success, that he would answer in his modest way, to Dr. Charles Evans, who was then principal of Marion High School and its history item of instruction.

“Two of the five councilmen are for sale. Two are honest men, and one is an unscrupulous quantity. The mayor is a politician. I’ve known them all since boyhood, and if I dared come out in the open, I think that even the crooks have sufficient strength for what the townsmen want for in this country to decide to hold the up.”

“Then why not come out in the open and have trouble and expense?”

“I am not ready to have a lot of noise raised on me,” Bryce replied dryly. “Neither am I afraid of having the law come to the door, or pay what is due in the retained fee.”

“Two of the Five Councilmen Are for Sale.”

Her market by cutting prices to a point where I would hate to sell my brother at a loss in order to get hold of a little ready money. Tell you, this man has the under his thumb, and the only way I can escape is to slip out when he isn’t looking.”

“This man!” Bryce said. “I tell you, I don’t say he would be too late to buy the city council to block you out.”

“I know he’ll be and steal. I dare say hold corrupt a point off.”

Bryce quickly rose and stretched himself. “I’ve got my work cut out for me, hasn’t it?” he declared with a yawn. “However, it is a field worth wading, and that at least will make it interesting. Well?”

They passed the time in the dusk and a mica silence. Bryce moved. “Herm!” he said to himself. Mr. Ogilvy. Mr. Ogilvy. Miss McTavish. The introduction having been acknowledged, the two parties became quiet. Mr. Ogilvy had a frequent need to interrogate one of these three. Mora, but it is not to be denied that his visits here had made a profound impact to everybody, and the exception to everyone. To that end he will be often called at night, when this portion of the law is absolutely deserted. You have an extra key to the office. Mora, I wish you would give it to Mr. Ogilvy.”

Mora turned her head and withdrew. Mr. Ogilvy continued. “Can speed the day when you come and find me here, and I’ll be permitted to tell the old man that he is measured. He placed his hand on his withers. “In that case, I’ll just say you are quite a good old man.”

“What have you done? I don’t think I’m a good old man.”

“I’ll just tell you one to your satisfaction, and have them buy

“It think it over,” said Mora. “My all means. Never decide such an important matter in a hurry. Just tell me your home telephone number and I’ll ring up at seven this evening for your decision.”

Reunited, Mora gave him the number. She was not at all prepared against this certain stranger—in fact he had a vague suspicion that he was a cure for the blues, an agent who had suffered from all the really bad weather. He was a respectful man, his manners were as refined as when he had been to the office, and he was dressed in a suit of a good old vintage. Mora had had a life of the best, and he was a good example of that.

Every man and woman in Kentucky should realize that it is his or her absolute duty as an American citizen to vote.

CHOOSE!

DALENTON (OHIO) TRACTOR. Which shall it be? Every man and woman in Kentucky must awake now to the vital importance of going to the polls on November 2 and registering his or her absolute conviction as to the issues in the campaign.

The Democratic Party has been guilty of an attempt to prevent Kentucky from voting.

Using a stock of darkness under which they hoped to hide their own shortcomings, they have attempted to keep the voters from believing that the Democratic Party is in the right.

This Democratic machine has made an appeal on grounds which do it no credit. It has resorted to methods which were discredited by thinking men and women many years ago.

What was the whole purpose of these methods, this cloak of darkness? Simply to blind YOU to the real issues.

Do they want to talk about the League of Nations? No!

Do they want to talk about the record of their national administration in the past seven years? No!

Do they want to talk about what? No!

Do they want to talk about ever-increasing taxes, prices, sugar, food-stuff, protection? No!

Do these vital issues? Only have no ground to stand upon.

Is it not easy to understand why they want to drag down issues and to introduce questions which have absolutely no connection with this campaign? Let us not be hoodwinked. Weigh these real issues carefully. You will not be long in realizing that the country's hope is in a new deal—a Republican administration headed by Warren G. Harding as President.

Don't forget election day, November 2.

Assert yourself.

DEMOCRATIC HOPE TO FOOL PEOPLE PROVES FAILURE

The Republican Party in Kentucky has one thing to be thankful for and that is the fact that Kentucky men and women are too intelligent to be hoodwinked by a cheap Democratic program.

Willing to come out in the open and face the real issues, our men to take a manly stand on the League of Nations, unwilling and unable to defend its representatives and its party record, the League of Nations has ruined everything it has done in the past.

It has already claimed that a vote against the League of Nations will be a vote against the men who voted in France. The men who had the nerve to use that been fit people, "The Plan de l'Alliance," in an advertisement appealing for a tax on it. It has tried to beat its record by electing with pre-judged and unscrupulous methods to get away from the unpleasant facts. But all in vain thanks to the intelligence of the people.

And now they are trying to claim the church and all religious activity as the sole property of the Democratic Party. That recent headline in a leading Democratic newspaper, "Therefore Stand Up For Our," is proof of this state of mind.

The best movement along this line was in Louisville several weeks ago when a minor Democratic candidate made a speech before the Moral and Anti-Slavery Club and said no man can guide my spiritual welfare who is against the League of Nations. This aroused the indignation of the ministers, and one of them arose and declared, "No man can have such a ridiculous statement as that can by my vote be helped into Congress."

This was followed by another meeting of the Moral and Anti-Slavery Club at which a speech was made by the Rev. W. C. Carter of the First Baptist Church.

Dr. Carter pursued the theme as a promoter of peace. He said that a lesser of war. He said that the League is a spiritual power of man and contended that programs of the League are trying to subvert a man-made article for peace which can only come through the Prince of Peace.

One reason for his opposition to the League, Dr. Carter said, was that God was left out of the covenant of Christ, out of the instrument used in the proceedings at which he was present. Dr. Carter pointed out the "Father of the Automobile." This title was given to Gottlieb Daimler, who constructed the first gasoline engine automobile.

FORDSON

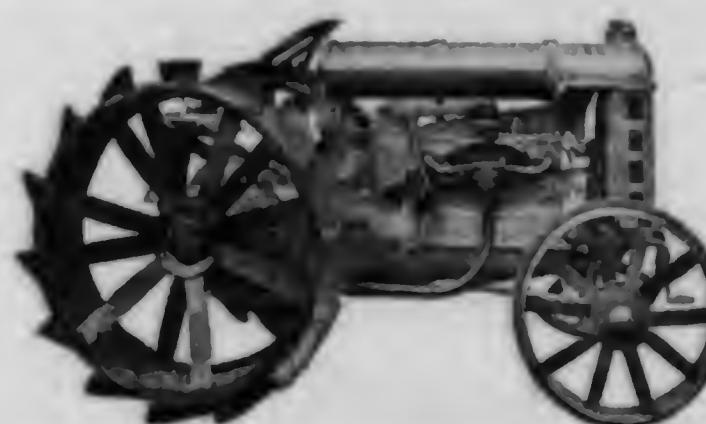

TRADE MARK

A Fordson Tractor on the farm means more prosperity for the farmer. It doesn't make any difference how you spell that prosperity—whether it is in increased production; whether it is in the saving that comes from a machine over a horse or a mule; whether it comes in a release from the drudgery and all-day and all-night labor on the farm for both man and wife—because the Fordson answers all those problems to the satisfaction of the farmer.

It can't be otherwise. These are the days of progress, and power on the farm is the necessity. It is only a question of what kind of power the farmer is going to have, but no farmer with the facts now before him can question the monetary advantage of machine power over horse and mule power. The Tractor is the farmer's necessity just as much as the sun is the necessity for growing crops.

All that is necessary for a farmer is to know his Fordson Tractor as familiarly as he understands handling a team of horses. He wants to use the same amount of reason and common sense. In the Fordson Tractor is the concentrated power of eighteen horses, and as flexible as the movement of your arm—much more flexible than horse control—and beyond all comparison much more economical both in service and in keep. Then it will do many things that horses and mules cannot do, and it doesn't eat when idle.

We don't believe there is any question in the mind of any farmer as to the necessity for a Tractor, but he may have some doubts as to what make of Tractor, so that is the reason we are putting this advertisement in this paper to draw his attention to the Fordson Tractor. That is why we put the above arguments before him, and why we now invite him to come in to our place of business and view the Fordson Tractor. Let us show him what it has done. Let us prove to him its superiority over any other Tractor. It means more to him than it does to us. When we sell a tractor we make a small profit, but when he buys a tractor he buys a working power that is working for him every day in the year; that is, if he buys a Fordson—we can't speak for the other kinds. Come in!
